

ABOUT OUR ADOPTION SUPPORT PROGRAM

Camelot Community Care's Adoption Support Program focuses on providing community-based support services to adoptive families in Hillsborough County. The main goals of the program are to connect adoptive families to one another for peer support, link families to community resources, provide adoption competent counseling, and support families through the adoption process and for as long as needed post adoption. The program also supports families who may have adopted years before but now need support for their family. The program is community based, trauma informed, and we partner with adoptive families to constantly evaluate what services are being offered and the quality of the services being provided.

SUPPORT GROUPS

Geographically based support groups allow adoptive parents living near each other to build a network of support and resources. Experienced adoptive families serve as leaders and help to bring families together for ongoing relationships, support, and intervention. Our support groups encourage the whole family to attend; the parents meet together with an experienced adoptive family leader while children meet with program staff who engage in psychoeducational activities focusing on social skills, self-esteem building, anxiety reduction, anger management, and peer interactions. Support groups have been formed in Temple Terrace, South Tampa, Lutz, and Brandon. To join a support group, please call 813.635.9765 and ask for The Adoption Support Program.

“ It was welcoming. Initially I was worried our ‘issue’ would be considered ‘less than’ since it is a bit unique...but everyone had very different stories to tell. I will go back for sure. ”
