“I was very satisfied with the help I received from Camelot. The counselor was very good at her job. I felt like they really care about their job and the lives they touch!”

– Parent, Ocala

Camelot’s Home & Community Based Counseling Services is a specialized program for children and adolescents with behavioral and mental health issues.

Counseling is provided in the child’s home, school and other community based settings. In some Camelot locations, counseling may be provided on an outpatient basis in one of our offices.

Camelot utilizes trained professional counseling staff who are experienced in providing services to children and adolescents and partners with parents who will play an active role in their child’s treatment. In-home services will be provided at times convenient for the family including evening hours. Children served may have experienced abuse, neglect and other traumatic events in their lives that lead to displaying behaviors such as:

- Anxiety
- Depression
- Verbal and physical aggression
- Lack of impulse control
- Defiance to parents and other adults

Each child has an individualized treatment plan developed with the parents to identify the behaviors and issues causing the most difficulty. Counseling staff will teach children and parents interventions and coping skills to address these behaviors. When necessary, Camelot staff may work with or in the child’s school.
